Biden: There's no doubt we're facing a mortal threat from Putin and the Russians Biden: There's no doubt we're facing a mortal threat from Putin and the Russians PITTSBURGH, Jan. 7 (UPI) -- Biden said the U.S. is facing a mortal threat from Vladimir Putin and the Russians, despite a denunciation of U.S. policy toward them from the Russian president. "There is no doubt that we are dealing with a mortal threat. We are faced with a threat to the very survival of our own democracy," Biden said, speaking at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey, Calif. "This time we are dealing with a man who already has won reelection, who already has shown a willingness to rig an election, to use cyber to disrupt our society, to invade other people's countries and to threaten our allies, so there is no doubt we are in a very dangerous situation," the vice president said. He said Putin has clearly shown a willingness to "pre-meditate acts of terror" to interfere with the U.S. election. "He's already interfered in our elections, we have reason to believe he participated in getting Trump elected," Biden said. "We have to deal with it. The president is the commander-in-chief, there has to be full cooperation, no security secrets, there has to be an immediate and total stop to what he is doing and all of his enablers. It has to be more than a national security state." Biden was chosen as vice president in 2008 at a time when President Obama was criticized for not taking strong measures to fight the war on terror
