A character macro program for the command line program MZIRC, which can be used in place of typing out the letters yourself. Supports all standard Unix character codes, both for control and graphic characters. With this program you can type much quicker than with standard commands. This version provides more than 80 of the most useful characters, all supported in most channels, with the following additions: I-Link (this is the "Eco-Link" character set). Punycode conversion with the following fonts (Installation Info): Big5, GB2312, HZ, JIS_X_0213, Shift_JIS, UHC. Support for the commands NAMES, HOST, and NOSEND (and IRC-version 3.9.8 and up). Feature: This version of KeyMACRO will allow you to search all MZIRC's supported channels for a channel. In most cases, KeyMACRO will let you find a channel that MZIRC will not. For example, for any channel that is closed, KeyMACRO will bring you to the most common channels that are open. KeyMACRO also contains a menu system and an "IRC-History" system, so you can search for a particular channel you have used before. All MZIRC's supported channels can be listed with this command: /list. You can add a new command to be performed when you press a key or a character from the menu system. KeyMACRO can be used as a command line program, or as a controller for MZIRC. If you use this option with the MZIRC command, a completely new MZIRC is created for that function. If you use this option as a controller, the settings you have applied to the new MZIRC are automatically applied to the MZIRC that is currently being used. This application works with MZIRC versions 3.8.3 through 4.0. MZIRC Features: You can combine text file and file name commands to be performed on-the-fly, and all commands can be run in the command line. When a command line command is finished, all the data is written to the clipboard. You can then paste it into any other application. You can also do "wait time", and in this case, the command will be run when the wait time has elapsed. This is an advanced feature, and can be used for all kinds of 81e310abfb
