Ultrasound investigations of 86 patients suffering from peripheral arterial occlusive diseases (PAOD) were performed for the purpose of the present study. The clinical picture and the results of the postexercise ankle-brachial pressure index (ABPI) were taken as a reference. The diagnostic value of the value of the Doppler measurement of the blood flow in the leg arteries at rest and following exercise (postexercise Doppler sonography) for the detection of PAOD was examined. In arteriosclerosis obliterans (ASO) as a whole the sensitivity was 66.1%, the specificity was 58.5% and the diagnostic efficiency was 65.2% for the postexercise Doppler sonography (PDS) at rest and 68.9%, 56.8% and 65.9% respectively for PDS following exercise. It can be assumed that the prognosis could be improved by a corresponding correction of vascular risk factors. Compared with the postexercise ABPI the sensitivity, specificity and diagnostic efficiency of the PDS were significantly higher. Moreover, in advanced atherosclerosis of the leg arteries the PDS was not able to record a significant decrease in blood flow following exercise as the postexercise ABPI did. A comprehensive Doppler sonography of the leg arteries at rest and following exercise could thus be used in the diagnostics of PAOD.Q: Как преобразовать строку в число? В progr 3da54e8ca3
