Connecting Fortune 500 Companies to Investors with the Blockchain Oct 1, 2018 | By Tommy Nguyen As a small company, we realized that we had to start connecting with investors – and fast. We found that it was going to take a huge network to reach potential investors, and we were making no progress. The lack of progress was driving us crazy. We knew we could do better. We decided to learn the fundamentals of networking, and we came up with our strategy: join a networking club. We had no idea what to expect. What we have learned since joining a networking club Connecting with 3 networks of investors The first networking club we joined was a beginners' network where we met a number of people with the same mindset as us. It was the perfect environment for us to start learning networking and getting to know investors. We learned about networking, and we learned how to connect with investors and build relationships that would help us with our pitch. Within a year, we went from knowing no investors to meeting with investors who would assist with our pitch, to getting investment from a renowned angel investor, to closing the funding round with over $1 million in funding. We have created a network of networkers that includes VC investors, industry experts, and angel investors. The connections, feedback, and mutual referrals have helped us on our journey. The networking club has helped us grow and expand to where we are today. 3e33713323
