(AP) — Most of California's 102 counties declared public health emergencies Tuesday, hoping they can stem the spread of the new coronavirus. While the dramatic steps came a day after Gov. Gavin Newsom's declaration of a state of emergency and the week after President Donald Trump's own order to Americans at the start of the new workweek, the declarations in the state's most populous counties left them in a position to take an unprecedented stance of planning for the potential health crisis they could face. As of Tuesday afternoon, 37.4 million Californians — more than 20% of the state's total population — had been ordered to stay home. Nearly 18 million of them — more than two-thirds — were told to avoid all non-essential travel, according to state data. Health officials declared a public health emergency in most counties. "Although the risks remain low, it's best to be prepared," Oakland Mayor Libby Schaaf said at a
