1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a battery charger that connects to an audio device having a battery as a power supply. 2. Background Art Ordinarily, a charging circuit for charging a secondary battery such as a lithium-ion battery, and an audio device connected to the charging circuit are housed inside a single casing, and a power supply battery for supplying an operating voltage to the charging circuit and to the audio device is formed inside the casing. Here, when the output voltage of the charging circuit lowers and becomes less than a predetermined voltage that causes start-up of the audio device, or when the charging operation of the charging circuit becomes a stop state, the audio device stops operating, and when the output voltage of the charging circuit recovers to a voltage that enables operation of the audio device, the audio device starts operating. However, because the power supply battery is formed inside the casing that houses the charging circuit and the audio device, it is necessary for the battery charger to have a large casing, and when the output voltage of the charging circuit lowers and becomes less than a predetermined voltage that enables the operation of the audio device, it is necessary to switch the battery charger to a standby state. To this end, a protective circuit for preventing the charging operation from being excessive by driving a relay is disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-open No. 2014-101685. With the technology disclosed in Japanese Patent Laid-open No. 2014-101685, since the protective circuit is housed inside the casing that houses the charging circuit and the audio device, the battery charger is required to have a large casing. Additionally, since the protective circuit is controlled to operate only when the output voltage of the charging circuit lowers below a specific level, it is difficult to ensure the operability of the audio device at startup of the battery charger. The present invention relates to a sheet feeding apparatus used in an image forming apparatus such as an electrophotographic printer or the like. In general, in a sheet feeding apparatus in an image forming apparatus, a sheet feeding tray for stacking sheets is mounted on an apparatus body, and one sheet is fed from the sheet feeding tray to a predetermined position on the apparatus body, thus printing an image on the sheet. Recently, a dual mode of copying function and printing function using either a single sheet feed mode or a double sheet feed mode for feeding a sheet by setting the sheet feeding tray at a predetermined position on the apparatus body is specified. Particularly, since both a clear print and
