Donald Trump Jr, Paul Manafort and Jared Kushner are to testify before the House intelligence committee in two closed-door sessions, Reuters reports. Trump Jr and Manafort will face questioning on their involvement with a 2016 meeting, organized by Donald Trump Jr, with Russian nationals promising “dirt” on Hillary Clinton. Kushner has been told he will be asked about his meetings with Russia’s ambassador to the US, Sergey Kislyak. “They’ll be asked if they had any knowledge of efforts to influence the presidential election, and what they knew of the meeting with the Russian lawyer and others,” a congressional source told Reuters. “The answers they provide could shed light on how the Trump team initially responded and what they knew.” The committee was briefed by former FBI director James Comey on his interactions with Trump, including an Oval Office meeting when he was sacked. It is understood the president’s lawyers have been negotiating with the committee regarding whether to give Trump immunity to testify, Reuters reports. White House officials have denied the president asked Comey to drop an investigation into his former National Security Adviser Michael Flynn. Trump, now three weeks into his presidency, said he fired Comey because “he was not doing a good job”, but has since admitted he was concerned about the investigation into Russia’s interference in the election.Q: Is it possible to save a large pool of objects to a file and have those objects reloaded? I'm writing a game, and I'm using a large pool of objects. I want to be able to save this pool to a file and be able to load from the file when needed. Is there any easy way of doing this? A: Sure, there are several ways to achieve this. If you're looking to store them in a binary file format (i.e. as raw bytes), you could pack them into a binary array in Java. With a bit of code this is trivial, and if
