Allopurinol plus probenecid versus probenecid alone for the treatment of recurrent gout. Allopurinol plus probenecid (AP) is widely used to treat gout patients, but no one has systematically compared the combination therapy with probenecid alone. The aim of the study was to evaluate the efficacy and safety of AP compared with probenecid alone. A total of 137 patients with recurrent gout were randomly assigned to receive either AP or probenecid, taken at the same time, every 8 h for 24 weeks. The primary outcome measures were drug-induced adverse events and efficacy, as measured by response rates to treatment and changes in the uric acid (UA) level. The incidence of adverse events was 52.2% in AP group and 45.3% in the probenecid group ($P = 0.27$). Among the treatment-related adverse events, gout flares were most common in both groups (AP group 25.9%; probenecid group 30.4%; $P = 0.37$). The other adverse events were similar in the two groups. Responder rate and uric acid level were similar at both 24 weeks and endpoint, between the two groups. This study suggests AP is not associated with a higher rate of adverse events compared with probenecid alone. No significant difference in efficacy can be achieved by adding allopurinol to probenecid. Council members have a strong proposal to give cash back to low-income residents, but one council member wants it expanded. "This is a proposal to use public dollars, private dollars to help low-income families get a better deal on their utility bill," said Councilman Darwin A. Markham at an education forum in February. "It can't be shared with other folks. It's just for them." The proposal, from Councilman Tom Butt, would limit grants to low-income customers to 50 percent of the difference between a high utility bill and a lower bill in the same year. For instance, a low-income customer spending $80 on power might receive $50 from the program. Butt's idea has no cap. The council would have to create an implementation committee, set priority goals and then spend the grant money. The council should also incorporate anti-discrimination language to help the program avoid being seen as a special-interest
