Now you can use the software to decorate your screen. or other means. The key attribute of the War Age, as can be seen in this narrative, was the book of Deuteronomy, which was used as a theological base-point. Yahweh had made a covenant with the Israelites in this book, and this covenant had been broken, first by the failure of the people of Israel to follow the law, and second by their idolatrous worship of their own "gods" (37:1). It is interesting that in one place (37:6) Yahweh allows Israel to take some prisoners of war as a military trophy, but then refuses to bless his chosen people with these spoils, lest they sin still further. Yahweh is God, and to him we submit, and the obvious inference of 37:11 is that the Lord can forgive us our sin once we repent. Perhaps he will allow his chosen ones to enjoy the blessing of victory in this war, but to be among those of us who live in idolatry will forever be like Cain and Esau, with all the consequences of that for the rest of our days. The false sons of God, or the "other gods", according to 37:11-12, are the gods of the nations of Canaan. This is a fitting description of the gods which were worshipped by the Canaanites. Just as the Canaanites looked to their "gods" to grant them victory in war, so did these other nations whose gods had been "taken away" look to their gods for aid or protection in war. These gods were idols, however, because they did not represent the true God, the one and only God. In 37:13-38 the Israelites are expected to be obedient to the true God, but this obedience does not mean that the land of Canaan is given to them "unconditionally". The return of the Israelites to Canaan after this long wandering in the
