Cropping Cropping means selecting what's in the photo and removing everything else, including image frames, mattes, and graphics. Most images are too big, and cropping to a size you want is a common initial step to creating a more organized and balanced image. You can also crop images to remove distracting objects or alter the composition of a photo. You can use a variety of methods to crop your images, such as the Rectangular or Free Select tools. With the Rectangular Select tool, you can make a selection that's fixed, or `_static_`, or you can choose a dynamic selection, in which you can move the tool to better define what is to be included in your selection. The `_moved_` image appears on the layer below your selection. The dotted border indicates the area that you're selecting. You can also choose to make selections from the Threshold or Refine Edge tool. Figure 11-5. The top image is a static selection. The one below it is from the Refine Edge tool. You'll use this tool when you need to make a precise selection such as selecting a detail from a background. With the settings shown in Figure 11-6, it should be easy to make a precise selection from the top right corner of the image to the bottom of the leaf.

Q: Can I import all public class attributes and methods into namespace I'm looking to bring "all public classes" into the namespace in ASP.net. I'm taking a static text book, and it doesn't have the Author, Publisher name, Publisher link, etc on the class names. Each class is actually in a different namespace. Is there a way of bringing in all public class attributes and methods? Thanks, M A: You can always bring all public classes into namespace using fully qualified class name: [System.Runtime.InteropServices.DllImport("cordbksv.dll", EntryPoint = "GetProperties")] public static extern string[] GetClassNames([Out] out uint count); [System.Runtime.InteropServices.DllImport("cordbksv.dll", EntryPoint = "GetProperties")] public static extern string[] GetClassNames2([Out] out uint count); //... var list = new List(); GetClassNames(ref count, out list); GetClassNames2(ref count, out list); for (var i = 0; i < list.Count; i++) GetClassNames(ref count, out list); You'll have to write your own code for parsing Class files (.Net Compact Framework). Q: Why must I create a test index in a SQL Server database after creating the primary key index? Why must I create a test index in a SQL Server database after creating the primary key index? Is it a waste of time? Will it have any negative performance impacts? A: This is because if a UNIQUE constraint is violated, SQL server will need to take the PRIMARY KEY row out of the index. The only way to find out if a violation has occurred is to create another index. That was the main reason for doing this: not to find out if a violation has occurred without such an index. It does not make much sense to use the index if it is not used

Lack of requirement for endogenous growth hormone to promote plasma glucose during short-term intravenous growth hormone infusion in pigs. Previous studies have demonstrated that exogenous growth hormone (GH) given to fetal sheep accelerates glucose synthesis and utilization, but it is unclear whether this can be achieved with GH administration in utero in the pig. To address this question, seven fetal pigs (125-135 days of gestation; term = 150 days) were administered GH (40 micrograms/kg i.v. over 15 min) or saline (NaCl) into the fetal aorta for 60 min after a 30-min basal period. No difference was detected between the GH-treated fetuses and controls in the fetal arterial plasma glucose concentration (2.3 +/- 0.1 vs. 2.3 +/- 0.2 mM, respectively; P = 0.71) or the amount of glucose infused to maintain euglycaemia (1.7 +/- 0.1 vs. 1.8 +/- 0.1 mumol.kg-1.min-1, respectively; P = 0.73) during the 60 min after the administration of GH or saline. The non-esterified fatty acid concentrations of the plasma from animals infused with GH (1.01 +/- 0.1 mM) or saline (0.66 +/- 0.1 mM) did not differ (P = 0.21). The fetal plasma GH concentration was increased (P < 0.05). Q: How to put different R projects into single directory. Sometimes folder is different, sometimes not I am using julia on ubuntu 16.04. The base directory structure is different in different projects, sometimes its called data, sometimes it is called etc, sometimes its called Code, or sometimes the project is at root of the directory. I know we can put different projects into separate directories, but I have to set the path all the time. Is there a way to set this global setting in julia file. My project has a local julia profile and project-X.jl, user@ubuntu:~/Projects/project-X$ ls -alh total 5.8M drwxr-xr-x 2 user user 10.0
