Insurgency: Sandstorm Review I had a look at Insurgency: Sandstorm at Gamescom 2016, and here's my take on the game. Developer: New World Interactive Publisher: 505 Games One thing is certain: New World decided to go a whole different way at setting the game apart from the insurgency genre. To me, the setting feels more like modern warfare, but if that's not your cup of tea, then perhaps the gameplay will sparkle more as a

What's new in Cygnus Pizza Race:

Nine Sols is a science fiction novel first published in 1950, written by

Jack Finney under the pseudonym Thomas Burnett Moses. It is notable for its portrait of science and science fiction, especially in the descriptions of the personality transformation that takes place in protagonist Perry Raymond Dark, the product of experiments performed on him at his infant age by aliens from the planet Centauri. One of the most cited examples of SF in literature, Nine Sols was listed at #5 on the National Book Awards long list for 1950. Plot summary While investigating a discharge of radiation from a local power plant, an unnamed star-gazer's corporation staff astronaut discovers a small UFO and goes to investigate. He finds the alien craft floating some distance above the Earth, and undisturbed by radiation or conventional gravity, with two spacesuited figures visible from the outside (alien technology has presumably kept them at ambient temperature while inside). One figure, believed to be a scientist or engineer from the vessel, communicates at the astronaut's request over a radio sent through space to the planet of his home—Earth. The astronaut is then subjected to some sort of tranquilizer, and tuckered-out floats in zero-g from the craft to the Foundation, where he is eventually put to bed and apparently forgotten. Upon waking later, still subdued by the drug, he recalls his actions and errs in the belief that he has been abducted by aliens. Since the Foundation is officially a secret science research station (although in use as an enormous hospital for long-term illness patients), it is not required to report such a thing to the United Nations. The patient's location is unknown to the Foundation's staff, for the guard at the entrance to the hospital wing where he is imprisoned is listed only as station "41." Wondering where he is, and assuming he has been drugged, the patient realizes that he is experiencing a coma. He unstraps himself from his bed, and out of a need to know as much as possible, by the time he has his senses back, his body is telemetrically controlled, based on muscular and electrical signals being picked up by the alien transporter, and he is taken to the room containing the radiation-evolving device. After unstrapping his hands from the bed, he relaxes and rescans the room—an eerie, computer-generated companion to the starry backdrop that exists in his half-dream world—before being airlifted to the glass/metal observatory at
