"I really have nothing to complain about. I loved the game; it was fun and offered a great story that kept me excited all the way to the end. I was able to feel the presence of other players in various situations. The online elements proved to be fun too." "A major plus is the fact that the game is saved every time you open the menu." "This game will definitely be a hit. I cannot wait to see what they come up with next." "This title adds to the list of games I can recommend to my friends. It was fun and the way they created a story, the online elements, etc., made it a lot of fun." WHAT'S NEW • Bug Fixes • Improves the stability of the game. • Optimization • Improves the UI. • Improves the performance of the game. FishOn is the first, and currently only, mobile game to cross the line into frightening territory, surpassing the boundaries of traditional graphical heights. A world where the strict laws of physics cannot be ruled, the will of a single fish, stands between the end of mankind and the ultimate victory. Loading Developed by the same team as Mushi Games, who famously designed the venerable Pong and Tetris, FishOn is essentially a match-3 puzzle game with a swimming theme. You control a fish with a "head" at the top of the screen and some kind of "body" at the bottom of the screen. You try to match the three similar symbols (ships, for example) on the top row to create chains with matching symbols that will move the fish down and through different barriers (rooms in this case, which look like the kind of tunnels in an aquarium). The more you combine symbols, the longer the chains. When the chains reach the bottom of the screen, you score a point and proceed to the next level. Completing one level doesn't automatically advance to the next, so the game is very much about making short work of the levels at hand. While your time is limited and the game makes a point of reminding you of this, there's also a secondary aim to this game which involves getting the highest score you can in a certain time period.
