You can find an extensive selection of tutorials and other free resources for people who are interested in learning Photoshop at www.adobe.com/photoshop/tutorials. Image manipulation tools Depending on the level of professional Photoshop a user works at, he or she can employ various image manipulation tools. In addition, certain image manipulation tools offer specific functions that allow users to create additional effects. A basic tool-set is provided with Photoshop, and you can add more tools as you need them. These tools include basic drawing and editing tools, and may include the following: Align Layers: This tool can be used to move and arrange all of the layers of an image at once. You can use the Align Layers command to align, resize, or move all of the layers at once. Blur/Sharpen: Blur and sharpen can be used to sharpen or blur an image. You can use the Blur/Sharpen tool to achieve the results in Figure 2-1. Clone Stamp: The Clone Stamp tool can be used to remove unwanted portions of an image. Clone Stamp is often used to remove unwanted leaves and other elements from a landscape image. It works great in very smooth areas of an image where details aren't being lost, such as in rocky outcrops, but has a limited affect on smaller details. Cloud Filter: This Photoshop filter tool can be used to take a gray or clear filter and add a gradient effect to a selection of pixels, as shown in Figure 2-2. Curves: The Curves tool is a powerful tool to correct colors. It gives you the ability to adjust the colors in your image according to a particular curve. You can adjust the curve so that more or fewer colors appear in the image. Dodge and Burn: The Dodge and Burn tool enables you to make changes in image lighting, such as adding light and removing dark areas. Distort: This tool is used to make changes to an object or to an image. You can distort an image, such as making it more or less oval, making lines more crooked, or turning it into a starburst effect. Eraser: The Eraser tool is used to remove unwanted areas of an image or object. It is perfect for removing small areas and details. Gradient Map: This tool is used to change the colors in an image by using grayscale to create a color gradient.

The two-story wood frame structure was built c. 1800-1805. Originally part of a larger farm complex, the house is one of Reading's few Colonial period farmhouses. It was listed on the National Register of Historic Places in 1983. Description and history The Kohler-Westfall House is located in a rural setting in the northern part of the town of Reading, on the south side of Garden Street at its junction with Keller Farm Lane. It is a -story, simple vernacular wood frame structure, with a gabled roof, clapboarded exterior, and granite foundation. A single-story wood frame ell extends to the north, at the corner with Keller Farm Lane. The house is oriented facing east, with a central chimney, with a dormer window on the north. The house is not centered on the street, but is attached on one side by the ell. The front (Garden Street) facade has a porch across its width, supported by square posts, with a low railing on both sides. The gable ends are studded with narrow studs, a characteristic of the Greek Revival. A projecting bay is on either side of the central chimney, and the side-wall of the porch is pierced by an entrance. The interior of the house retains modestly-detailed Greek Revival woodwork. The house was built about 1790 by Peter Kohler, a local farmer. Kohler owned a gristmill in the area, and he adapted the house to that use. In 1805 his son George Kohler Westfall, and his family, bought the property. George Kohler Westfall was a local politician, and served as a state representative and state senator. He also served as Reading's first mayor, from 1827 to 18 05a79cecff

sixtynine wine "I love our wine region. It's a little exotic compared to some European regions and people associate, 'Oh, they make sweet wine,'" says Tara Dawson, the winemaker at sixtynine wine. "But they really make Pinot noir and Chardonnay that's really crisp and has a lot of minerality. It's really interesting to serve to people." sixtynine's last party in West Palm Beach coincides with the release of the wine's cork-and-cage-free packaging, along with new bottles that come in a sleek black box and a more casual gift box. All bottles include a color insert and sixtynine is now available for purchase in retailers throughout Palm Beach County. If you don't live in South Florida but still want to support local wineries, the sixtynine tasting room at Tivoli in Palm Beach Gardens now makes their wine available for purchase on-site. A few more recommended wine picks: Tara Dawson describes sixtynine as a "real food wine," the type of wine that should be paired with fresh food that you cook at home. But they also make a very nice, more refined, slightly sweeter Pinot noir that's perfect for a winter dinner. For their newest release, the winery released "Smooth Segue," a Pinot noir blend of new and older vines from Chambourcin, Burgundy, Alsace, Tasmania and Central Coast. Tara Dawson also describes sixtynine as being focused on bringing "an authenticity and uniqueness to the region," so if you're looking to find a new winery to try, take note. A variety of sixtynine releases come from Italy, Spain, France and the region near Lake Geneva, all making incredible wines. The opportunity to sample "Beau Claire" from their most recent release (which is also the winery's first offering) was a rare chance to taste through a cask that was aging since its creation over 12 years ago. The wine was previously released at an event in Paris, so there's no better place to be than in South Florida to find this rare new release. For the most part, s

Q: Python, Dataframes - How to separate columns into separate dataframes? I am retrieving data from a MySQL database with Python. What I would like to do is to separate out the columns I want, but into their own dataframe. For example, the result of the code I have written so far is this: Col Name Data 123 2 123 3 456 1 456 2 456 3 What I want is this: Col Name Data 123 2 456 1 456 2 456 3 The code I have so far is: cur = dbConnect.cursor() cur.execute("SELECT ColName,Data from Table") cnt = cur.fetchall() df_cnt = pd.DataFrame(cnt) df_cnt.columns = ['ColName', 'Data'] df_cnt What am I doing wrong? A: Try to use.groupby() df_cnt = pd.DataFrame(df_cnt.T.stack().groupby(level=0).sum()) What are the best gaming headsets?
