Check out this video preview showing the new gameplay features: What makes the technology unique is that the data is a “direct representation of the player’s ‘true’ movement; a unique data set created in real-time from the motion capture technology” in real-life. All player movements are taken into account in creating the data, providing a closer representation to real-life movements than existing motion capture technology. “When an athlete performs, he or she only ever tries to meet the demands of the moment. The technique and skills required in real game situations are not static, so perfecting those elements of your game is one of the most important things you can do when preparing for a match,” said Danny MacFarlane, Executive Producer for FIFA. “So when we set out to design a new way to create and play within FIFA, we wanted to use motion capture technology to create the most authentic experience possible. Our goal was to build a game that would allow you to train in a sport-like fashion, with the challenge, skill, and intensity of a real-world match. And in doing so, we wanted to help you unlock your potential and succeed at the highest level.” For the first time in the franchise, you'll be able to play in VR. You can choose to play FIFA 18 or Fifa 22 Crack in VR mode, and can also play FIFA on PS4 Pro and PS4 using a DualShock 4 controller or on any Sony PC using the PS4 system link app with features like motion controls, special effects and beam weapons. You can also use the PlayStation VR headset to play the game. You can also add up to 30 friends from your PlayStation Network friends list to form a squad or use your real-life friends' squads for local matches. "Throughout my years in eSports I've found that the more you understand about the game you're playing, the better you'll perform," said Alex Leuty, Senior Producer on FIFA. "The Motion Accuracy tech we've developed is one way we're able to provide you with a gameplay experience that's even closer to a real-life match. It takes this closer to real-life movement, along with real-time data and AI, and automatically creates the training experiences of a real-life match. You can now learn all the elements you need to perform at your best in
