If I have a function that returns Nothing, should the result type be [Option] or Option[]. Here is a minimal example: object Main extends App { def foo(x: Int): Option[String] = x match { case i if i > 0 => i.toString case _ => None } foo(5) println(foo(0).toList) } In this case, we have two options, an None and an Int, which is strange. But this is probably because `Int` is effectively a subtype of `Any`, and the Scala compiler could treat this as a hole. This test compiles fine: `object Main extends App { def foo(x: Int): Option[String] = x match { case i if i > 0 => Some(i.toString) case _ => None } foo(5) println(foo(0).toList) }` As I've said, this seems strange. I could imagine that the compiler would have a different strategy when a `None` is passed to some function that will return an `Int`. Is there any difference between these two options, and if so, why? A: The compiler has a bug (bug 1213, bug 1286, bug 7123, bug 6938) that makes the result type of `x match...` be `Int` rather than `Nothing` (`Option[`
