A: This is the same problem as I solved with the title HP Golden Trixel. The title wasn't mounting the controller, but rather my keyboard. So, the fix was to: Register the game as a controller game. Unplug the controller. If the title is a USB keyboard, right click, and select "Eject". Put the controller in. Plug the controller. Click "Set as Controller", then Plug/Unplug the controller as appropriate. I had the same problem with this title: Alien Race (2013) and: HP Golden Trixel (2016) A: If you are using Steam for this game, try unplugging the controller first, then plug it in again. Do not unplug it, then plug it in again. There was a bug that made it behave that way. It makes sense to unplug it before plugging it in again. This is the correct sequence: Plug in the controller Unplug the controller Plug in the controller Set it as a controller All done! Zaratan - Omar "Al Gh Neon Nights is a pinball game with challenging gameplay inspired by the popular cyber-punk novel 'Neon Chrome'. The player assumes the role of a freelance agent working under the orders of a shadowy organisation which has entered the cyber-punk world to finance its capital gain. You must explore and evaluate the cyber-punk underworld to acquire the data you need to begin construction of your next project. In this setting, the player is given a black version of the classic pinball-style control interface. Of the six buttons, the pad's ability to be held as a gyroscope allows the player to use these buttons as more standard "flippers". As the player progresses through the story, he/she is introduced to new special moves, and new opportunities will occasionally present themselves. As the player progresses through the missions, they are rewarded with items which can be used to complete a more complicated task. To acquire any item, the player must complete a task. There are no hints provided for the player, so to successfully complete tasks he/she is required to think outside the box and thoroughly explore the game's body. What's new in Neon Nights Pinball:

is a pinball video game developed by MikroBros Studios. Originally planned as a 2006 release by Axelfield Games, it was delayed and then canceled in 2006 by developer MikroBros, who then gradually sold its assets. The rights to the game are owned by Hasbro. The prototype for Neon Nights was screened at the Interactive Digital Entertainment Expo in May 2005, at which time it was awarded the 'Pinball Product of the Year' award.[1] Neon Nights Pinball is mainly a combination of pinball and a trivia game. Players have to answer questions based on the game's theme (for example, how many stars are in the Memphis skyline) and match in-game sections using the playable game elements on screen. Gameplay takes place on twelve individual lanes, each of which is divided into sections, which in turn are divided into panes. Players answer question-based trivia questions and must complete a part of a circuit along a lane before returning to the home base. Each lane is divided into sections which, in turn, may be divided into panes. The total length of the game is 10 minutes.[2] The layout consists of four major sections — home base; sky town; Vegas Strip; and a final "Finishing Line." The home base contains the video display, where players answer questions, view the mini-Jukebox, and access the in-game cash system. There are six sections in total, with the player having to complete the entire circuit on each lane to collect 100 points. When each section is completed players receive an extra go to collect 100 points. There is also a 90 point bonus available when the player completes the game after all 12 lanes are completed. In addition to the six lanes, the outer layout consists of a "Flatout" bonus board where players are rewarded for completing a level and reaching "Arcade mode" without hitting the gutter. In "Arcade mode," the skill and accuracy of the ball are "split" and greater accuracy results in an increased time in "Arcade mode." Players progress through twelve segments of the game, and must complete each one before moving on to the next segment. The in-game minigame sections are two-player: However, the addition of a second player allows for the access of two set of players, allowing games to be played with a maximum of four players on the same pinball table (two per lane).[3] The league consists of three
