Contents Overview Adobe Photoshop Elements is Adobe's entry-level digital photography program. It is intended for both enthusiasts and professionals. In addition to editing photos, Adobe Elements also supports image manipulation, camera RAW conversion, batch processing, photo storage, and printing. Adobe Elements is available for Mac OS X, Linux and Windows. For Windows, Adobe has provided a trial version of the program with limited features for 30 days of use. Adobe sells the Elements package separately for Mac OS X at $99 and for Windows for $89. The full version for the Windows and Mac OS X platforms provides unlimited downloads, printing, and editing. Adobe Photoshop Elements is based on the idea of providing a full set of tools to a typical consumer and professional. It does not limit itself to any specific type of photo editing, instead including many useful features that can be customized to fit the individual needs of each user. Philosophy The best images are never-before images. Elements puts the power back into your hands so you are able to take advantage of the artistic and creative potential of your photos and enhance the quality and beauty of your photos no matter what the type of photo editing your profession. Adobe Elements is intended to offer tools to the non-professional photographer for taking photographs and home printing without the time or money usually required to outsource the process to a professional. The user interface is straightforward, making it easy for beginners to operate. Features Mac OS X and Windows Interface Photoshop Elements provides most of the features of the full-version of Photoshop. However, it is generally simpler to use. Adobe has tried to streamline Photoshop Elements as much as possible. The user interface uses a purpose-built, task-based design. For example, the Paint Bucket tool, used to select a specific area of the image, is displayed as a paint bucket. Elements includes all of the basic Photoshop tools, such as: Camera Raw can take and convert RAW photos using various settings. The Curves dialog lets you manipulate the brightness and contrast of an image to your liking. The Crop tool allows you to crop an image to a specific size. The Levels dialog allows you to change the color of pixels in a photo to bring out good detail or darken out areas that are overexposed. The Photo Filter dialog lets you apply various effects on your photo. This 388ed7b0c7

Q: Bitcoin difficulty mining wallet for the first time I have seen many questions regarding this issue on the web (especially on bitcoin.org and this website), but there is so little to no information regarding first time miners on a new installation. I am just starting to mine (with about 16 hours of hashing power) on my home PC. The reasons I am doing so are that I have an older ATI Radeaon HD5750 video card and a slow CPU. I have Windows 7 Home Premium (64-bit) and have installed the latest AMD Catalyst drivers for my video card. I am mining on the getblocktemplate, and I am not even using any pools yet. It seems that I am unable to mine at all because I get nothing but "RPC ERROR: 2560006:2205:2205:2205:2205", and I can't figure out what is going on. I have Googled all over and have read some questions regarding this problem. However, I have run out of luck with this issue, and I'd like to get some answers. EDIT: I am able to mine a tiny block (after about 20 hours of hashing power). The problem is that there is a "double-spend" issue. Also, I am able to mine with 1.5 MW of hashing power (and when I set my hashing power to 1.0, I will be mining for 2 months), which is odd because my video card is only capable of 1.3 MW. A: There are a few thing to check. 1.You are not trying to mine at all, you are just hitting the RPC at the default - specifying options. 2.You don't have enough CPU power and/or you are not connected to the internet. The RPC is called by the bitcoind client when it needs to connect to a bitcoin node. If your bitcoin node is not ready to handle its cpu power requirements, you won't be able to mine. If it is connected to the internet, it will check in with the bitcoind client what network and services are available. It won't be connected to the network until you send it requests that it wants to verify (connect to the network) and check (getconfig / getblocktemplate). If your device does not have enough processing power, then you are not going to be able to mine. If you have a

Q: Laravel 5: Validation for an array of objects I have a form that requests the fields of two models that look something like the following: Schema::create('items', function (Blueprint $table) { $table->increments('id'); $table->string('name'); $table->integer('size'); $table->integer('color'); $table->integer('quantity'); $table->integer('price'); }); Schema::create('forms', function (Blueprint $table) { $table->increments('id'); $table->integer('name')->unique()->unsigned(); $table->integer('item_id')->unsigned(); $table->timestamps(); }); My question is about validating an array of forms, which are contained inside a single parent model. I've tried the following with no luck: public function rules() { return [ ['forms.*.name'], ['size','required'] ]; } I'd like to be able to validate, and return an error if any value is not present inside an array of forms: [ { "name": "Item Name", "item_id": 1, "size": 1, "color": 1, "quantity": 1, "price": 1 }, { "name": "Item Name", "item_id": 1, "size": 1, "color": 1, "quantity": 1, "price": 1 } ] A: Firstly add a validation array to the model. You can just use the name of the array to validate each field's rules. public function rules() { $rules = [ 'name' => [ 'required',
