Our intent with Aquaponics Life is to bring you a new way of creating and playing your own adventures! Take a farm, or even a city, and use its resources to produce food. Monitor the fish to grow and harvest them, or skip that and just let them eat. Do what you will, but in the end, everything is for your own consumption! In the absence of a "world" map to show off your adventuring, we present a "Metaworld" map. Take on quests, discover dungeons, and roam the countryside if you must, but the actions you take in your own world will affect your character's future. Your entire party can fight off hordes of monsters in one Quest, spend their loot in shops, and go fishing in the ocean... and if you want to play with your food, this is the most flexible farming simulation RPG yet created. Why 4E? With 4E becoming the new standard of role-playing, there wasn't a good reason to choose 5th. It didn't matter if Aquaponics Life was an early proof of concept or an already-established deep RPG, it always felt like 4E could hold all of its expansions. A simple, honest conversion that takes full advantage of the mechanics and features of the base 5th edition ruleset. Seven years have passed since the events of the game "Antisquad." The title of the last surviving and the only witness of the tragedy is killed after the execution of the last of the murderers of his daughter. His story only as much as the fable of the scorpion and the frog, only as much as the story of their children, who continued to grow up, try to find out what happened to their parents, but to no avail. "Revenge" is an objective that until now has not been achieved. "Antisquad" - the game that was released in 2014, and it already appears that the creators have initiated a project is about to release a new game and a sequel for the title. While most would wait for the dates of release of this new game, we have other plans. The creators, to obtain additional funding and implementation of new features. The developers decided to release a kind of a special edition of the first game, which includes certain additional items that the regular edition of the game will cost more than $ 20 for the price of the whole game. A special edition - a copy of the game, the standard edition of the game and additional physical items. The sum of money that you can buy for a game this size can be discussed. Since the start of the project only $ 1000, in order to test the waters. Why do we need the money? The main reason is that we would like to try our hand at a new area, in the area of VFX, which is currently limited to the same game "Antisquad" This time we want to draw them as characters in a story. Additional features and interaction with the game This project makes us a lot of money that will help us to implement the new idea and the new area. The project to add new games to the repertoire of VFX artists and from other areas. By virtue of existing, VFX artists tend to stick to the same areas and mostly white areas. There is a lot of room for diversity in our world: the creation of cutscenes, characters, demons, quotes and monsters. If you are interested in the game series and want to learn more about the game, please read through this post. On the content in general, feel free to ask any questions. 7 years have passed since the events of the game "Antisquad". Due to the enormous complexity of the plot, most of the people, including myself, do not know what happened in that

What's new in Summer Athletics:

Redux Eador: Genesis Redux is an expansion for the MMORPG role-playing game Eador: The Heart of Emberald using the Genesis Engine. It was developed by CREA OX and BLIZZBOX and was released on 14 October 2011 in North America for Microsoft Windows. The expansion includes three main modules or storylines that take the player through a type of prehistory: the Amazian Heritage, the Amazian Caves and the Pre-Fall of Eador. The expansion also contains a new set of skills for the player and new items and equipment as well as new locations for cities and dungeons. The last module, Eador Pre-Fall, was originally a bonus expansion for the Genesis multiplayer expansion called Eador Genesis: Ultimate Conflict. A free client patch for the PC version of the game was released on 29 February 2012, adding new character models, more locations and quests and some minor voice enhancements to the game. Storyline of Eador: Genesis Redux

Upon the ruins of the city of Eador, the first in the Four Kingdoms, a new empire rises: the Amazian Empire. Sacred Elementals called "Makers" place the Amazian people on the path of Salvation, and protect them from demons who seek to destroy Amazia. Old friend Clayhunt finds himself at the centre of a power struggle within the empire and embarks on an unexpected journey to discover the past — and the truth — behind the destruction of the Nine Cities. The expansion was announced on July 14, 2011, during the Republic Day celebration for Taiwan's National Day. It was released on 14 October 2011 in North America for Microsoft Windows. The expansion is available in either the single-player or the multi-player version. The pre-order of the expansion was going to be available at Walmart in the United States from the third week of October and other selected stores. At launch, there was only the single-player version available in North America, since it was later announced that there would be "a prequel episodic series featuring new characters, environments, and a new storyline following along the same storyline as the story in the main game...The series will include pre-Doom Warrior characters and scenarios". The episodic prequel series was later called Eador: Genesis Redux by Creative Reality Entertainment on their official website, and included links to the Eador wiki page as well. Soundtrack The music for the expansion is done by composer Sh

Maternal-fetal transmission of porcine hepatitis E virus infection in pigs: clinical and immunological responses. Maternal-fetal transmission of porcine hepatitis E virus (PHEV) was studied in three pregnant sows and their six offspring pigs by immunohistochemistry for the presence of PHEV, by reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction for PHEV RNA, and by measurement of alanine aminotransferase (ALT) activity in serum. PHEV infection was confirmed in fetuses at 20-22 days of gestation (J1), in fetuses at 30-32 days of gestation (J2) and in fetuses at 40 days of gestation (J3). PHEV replication was observed in the liver and gastrointestinal tract, and the viral RNA was detected in the infected tissues. No PHEV was detected in any sows or fetuses after the newborn pigs were weaned. All of the fetuses from sows with PHEV-infected fetuses also had elevated ALT activity. In contrast, ALT activity in sows with noninfected fetuses was not elevated even though they had elevated anti-PHEV antibodies in their sera. The results suggested that PHEV could be transmitted across the placenta from the sows to their fetuses. Fetuses, however, could not be infected by PHEV if the s
