My question: is there a way for me to use the unsupervised k-fold CV in MATLAB? I would like to have the results of the repeated training and validation, rather than those of a single CV. A: No, there isn't a way to use unsupervised k-fold for cross-validation. (Even if you think the number of samples is equal to the number of columns of data in your training set.) I was thinking about a solution like you want when looking for a way to perform active learning, and I got sidetracked thinking about an idea in using cross-validation for active learning, but then I gave up on that thought and abandoned the idea because it would involve running a simple linear regression on the training data. Maybe it's possible to use a very simple neural network like a single hidden layer perceptron to perform the classification for you instead. I don't know of an option to do this in MATLAB. But you can use the following Python code (which I have adapted from this code by @Carlos Martín Perrero): import numpy as np import matplotlib.pyplot as plt from sklearn.cross_validation import KFold from sklearn.neural_network import MLPClassifier # Train using the training set # Example: training_set = (X0,y0), (X1,y1),..., (Xn,yn) def train_model(X,y,kwargs): # Build the MLP mlp = MLPClassifier() mlp.fit(X,y) return mlp # Train using k-fold # Example: k-fold = 5

This is how the Cummins Dakota Dual Purpose engine works. Diesel engines are strong, reliable, efficient, and affordable. The Cummins Dakota DP engine is a step into the future.The diesel engine is a powerful little engine. With an electric starter, the base Cummins engine is capable of running at a maximum of over 9000 revolutions per minute. The Cummins Dakota DP engine is designed for use on larger tractors and combines that power with the agility of a diesel engine with some of the key benefits of a traditional gasoline engine.The Cummins Dakota DP engine is an industrial engine. It offers an economic solution for medium-duty hydraulic applications with better performance than a gasoline engine. Its higher efficiency and lower emissions also make it an effective option for agricultural applications.
