[Diagnosis of orbital lesions in superior orbital fissure syndrome]. The objective of this study was to evaluate the use of different imaging techniques and clinical features in the diagnosis of orbital lesions. Sixty consecutive patients who had a diagnosis of superior orbital fissure syndrome at the University Eye Hospital of Hannover were examined. The patients were examined by a senior neurologist, an ENT specialist and an orbital radiologist. The most frequent neurological symptoms were frontalis and lacrimal problems (69%), followed by exophthalmus (67%). The most frequent clinical features were proptosis (73%), diplopia (46%) and diminished extraocular movements (46%). In 69% of the patients there were no abnormal neurological findings, but only 13% were suspected to be primary non-arteritic anterior ischaemic optic neuropathy. CT scan showed very high sensitivity, but specificity was low in 14%. Orbital MRI showed 100% specificity and a higher sensitivity than CT in 8%. Orbital ultrasound revealed high specificity, but a sensitivity of only 57% in 24 patients with abnormal CT scan. Superficial temporal artery and migraine both seem to be common in superior orbital fissure syndrome and should be suspected in patients with orbital symptoms and with a high age. CT, MRI and orbital ultrasound yield the most important diagnostic information in the diagnosis of orbital lesions.

What's New In Adobe Photoshop Elements 8.0 Download?

Q: How to get information from a database I am using Delphi 10

Seattle with a SQL Server Express database. I know that the SQL Server Express is a simple database (not a full blown server) so my question is how do I get all the information about one of the tables I have in the database? A: You could use the TDataSet component. It allows you to do stuff like var ds: TDataSet; begin // Open a datasource to a particular TDataSet ds := TDataSet.Create(nil); //... Open the DataSet... From that DataSet you can then query

using the standard TSQL queries. For example:

var rs :
TSQLQuery; ds: TDataSet;
begin // Open a datasource to a particular TDataSet ds := TDataSet.Create(nil); //... Open the DataSet... rs :=
TSQLQuery.Create(nil); //
Query for name of the first result row rs.Open('SELECT name FROM dbo.TestTable', ds); // Get first row rs.First; //
Close the query rs.Free; // Query for name of the third result row rs :=
TSQLQuery.Create(nil);

rs.Open('SELECT name FROM dbo.TestTable', ds); // Get third row rs.FieldName('name').As String := ds.FieldName('nam e').AsString; // Close the query
rs.Free; // Drop the Dataset
ds.Free; end;

A: The basic way you are dealing with an SQL Server database with Delphi is via the ADO components. There is a built in database adapter (TADOConnection) that is easily accessible and you can use the query language of SQL Server to communicate with the database. A TADOConnection object allows you to open a connection to a database, execute SQL queries against the database, insert data into the database, update data in the database, delete data in the database, and so on. You can also use a TADOStoredProc component to process the results from an SQL
