

HyperMotion Technology across the entire game promises footballers with control of everything on the pitch. From the moment you boot up FIFA 21 to the moment you play a match to the presentation of your Player Card - the animation of everything you do is now as realistic and authentic as possible. The capture and measurement of each player's movements in motion capture suits was performed by OptiTrack, with inputs coming in from a variety of camera angles and movement sensors, allowing the full 3D camera data to be captured. This new data was then shared with FIFA 21's AI and used to design a new engine which now powers all interactive player models and animations. A new Dynamic Player Model System allows players to change their size, speed and appearance, depending on the situation and any changes in their performance on the pitch. Players are also able to change their in-game weight, reducing their inertia and making them quicker and more agile. The goalkeepers are also being assisted by their goalkeeper coach, whose on-pitch feedback will now be incorporated into player animations and the pitch's AI, making for more realistic goalkeeping. With over a decade of combined experience in sports performance, gameplay and coaching, we wanted to simulate the processes and decisions that a coach would make, and now we have the tools needed to implement that approach in a way that has never before been possible. Away from the pitch, the Authenticity Stance System (ASS) is used to drive the build of an entire player's bio-metrics and attributes, based on their play style, level, position, nationality and ethnicity. Players are then presented in the Off-Heath Editor with their personal bio-meatic profile card, a series of animations and a combination of physical attributes which are used to define how they will play. On-pitch animation has also been given a boost and in all situations, players will react in a more realistic and natural way to challenges, whether it's a tackle, an aerial duel or a passing or receiving the ball. Players can also access new animations and skills thanks to their player cards, which are now interactive and can be customized with new attributes, body type, abilities, attributes, skills and legacy. The new Strength Meter in particular is now connected with Player Control and Mind Games, allowing players to see how strong their dribbling
