Nous sommes encore huit mois chez nous et nous nous demandons quel malin nous est venu d'avoir un autre être derrière nous (bonne nouvelle) avec lequel nous devons continuer de travailler. Des journaux réguliers viennent nous annoncer la mort de Maxime, dont la famille dans une lettre demande « de continuer de communiquer avec vous le plus longtemps possible ». La lettre est suivie de quelques mots dans un français quelque peu raté, un « Maxime remercié de toute l'amitié et de toutes les recommandations ». Genetic variant near the fructosyltransferase gene is associated with acute myocardial infarction in a Chinese Han population. Fructosyltransferase, encoded by the FUT2 gene, is involved in the synthesis of ABO blood group substances. A previous genome-wide association analysis demonstrated that rs601338 in FUT2 is associated with IgA concentration and blood pressure. However, no association between rs601338 and acute myocardial infarction (AMI) has been reported. In this study, a hospital-based case-control study was conducted using the TaqMan assay in a Chinese Han population. The distributions of sex, age, body mass index and smoking status were similar between cases and controls. The C allele of rs601338 was associated with an increased risk of AMI (OR = 1.27, 95%CI: 1.03-1.56, P = 0.026), after adjustment for sex, age, body mass index and smoking status. This variant was significantly associated with the presence of coronary artery disease (OR = 1.66, 95%CI: 1.14-2.44, P = 0.007), but not with serum cholesterol or low-density lipoprotein cholesterol. In a subgroup analysis by sex, only the CC genotype of rs601338 was associated with an increased risk of AMI in males (OR = 1.84, 95%CI: 1.07-3.16, P = 0.027). This study reveals a novel association between rs601338 and the risk of AMI in the Chinese Han population. Further studies are warranted to replicate these findings and to determine the underlying mechanism.
