Photoshop offers powerful features to enhance, repair, and even alter an image to get the best results for your project. The Photoshop Expressions panel enables you to use a special range of effects called `_filters_` that the community has created. Elements — a free program that is part of the Adobe Creative Suite. Figure 18.2 shows the File Open dialog, where you can choose to import or open a file in Photoshop Elements. Figure 18.2: The File Open dialog enables you to import or open a file in the Elements program. Photoshop Elements is a quite different interface to Photoshop's. Elements offers a simplified user interface and fewer tools, which makes it easier for beginners to get started. Photoshop Elements enables you to use a variety of filters to enhance your images before you save them as a JPEG, TIFF, or PSD. To use the elements filter, click on the Images tab at the top of the workspace window and choose Filter⇒Elements⇒Elements Filter. You can also access the filter by clicking the icon at the bottom left of the workspace window (see Figure 18.3). Figure 18.3: A preview of the Elements filter. When you click to open the Elements Filter, you can use as many or as few elements as you want to add to your image. For example, you can use a brick texture, a grunge filter, a sharpen filter, and so on. You can also add overlays for special effects such as mosaic images, frame and matting, and metallic glitter. Once you open the Elements filter, you can use these elements in either the Photoshop or Photoshop Elements workspace. When you have Elements open, you can find the Elements filter in the same spot as the Photoshop Elements Creative Suite Filter on the left side of the workspace window. In addition, there are seven preset filters located in the Filter Gallery (see Figure 18.4). These are essentially premade Elements filters that you can apply to any image in your library.

Q: Can one use the definition of n -Hopf algebra to prove that $H \otimes k \cong H' \oplus H''$? Let H be an n -Hopf algebra ($n > 1$) and let H' and H'' be k -Hopf subalgebras. Consider the vector space $V := H \otimes k$ with component-wise action. Define multiplication $\mu: H \otimes V \rightarrow V, \lambda; \lambda; h \otimes v \mapsto h v$ and unit map u :

I. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an enclosed air-conditioning system for air-conditioning an enclosed area, the system comprising an outdoor unit, the unit having an air-conditioning unit, which is designed for inside-outside air-conditioning in which outside air is forcibly blown to an interior space of the enclosed area by utilizing an outside air duct when the outside air temperature is high. II. Description of the Prior Art Air-conditioning systems of the type mentioned above are constructed so that when the outside air temperature is high, the outdoor unit is operated in such a manner that an outside air intake port provided in the air-conditioning unit is brought into communication with an air suction port provided in the outside air duct or an outside air intake port provided in the outside air duct through a high temperature air bypass, the air being forcibly blown into the interior space by utilizing the air suction port. However, in such a conventional air-conditioning system, the air suction port is communicated with the outside air intake port through the high temperature air bypass provided in the system, which results in that air in the interior space of the enclosed area is largely exhausted to the outside through the outside air intake port during the operation of the air-conditioning unit. This results in that even if the humidity of the air in the interior space of the enclosed area is high, the air in the interior space of the enclosed area is dehumidified, whereby the occupants, who are in the enclosed area, feel discomfort.
