There are now known optical card readers which can be used to read optical cards, such as credit cards, and which are more versatile and better able to cope with the optical cards than conventional magnetic card readers. One such optical card reader is illustrated and described in European Patent Application No. 0368656, which is incorporated herein by reference. The European Application describes a conventional mechanical/electrical card reader having a card slot through which an optical card is inserted for subsequent reading. Such a conventional card reader does not require any electrical power for it to operate, but it is only able to read one card at a time, and it is necessary to manually insert another card in its place after a reading operation is carried out on the first card.Tag Archives: bubble tea I remember when I was little, we used to eat bubble tea, but I didn't start to buy it myself until I was in college. And since I was in school, I'm fortunate to have a favorite spot to get the best bubble tea, Yesha's. To be honest, I didn't know how to make a good bubble tea. I mean, like most of the bubble tea recipes, you just need to boil the water and mix them. It's not difficult, really. I came to know about the recipe with the ingredients from IrieRice, and so it was funny to find out they don't even boil the water! (They don't have a microwave oven, so the water boiling here doesn't count.) It was a good thing, too, because we still have to buy the iced tea powder from the store anyway. With that, we have more money to spend on the ice cubes to 0cc13bf012
