Most important for the game is Flight and Level view modes: You can look down from above or zoom in from the location in which you land and check the views in between the flight. Control: You must control the aircraft from the left stick and move the aircraft with the right stick. Following the aircraft is not required. Attitude: You can keep the aircraft in the desired attitude by pressing the Y button and moving the left stick. Pressing the Y button in the "Auto Fly" mode activates the "Auto fly mode". In order to keep the aircraft in the right attitude, you can press both the + and - button together. You can also stop the engine, disconnect the propellers or disconnect the batteries by pressing the G/S button. Mode: You can switch the different types of mode, also known as engine mode or flight mode, by pressing the up and down buttons. You can turn the engine on/off and switch to the manual flying mode by pressing the E/M button. You can also disable the autopilot by pressing the E/P button. Flight System: There is a "flight system" of the software in which the game simulates the attitude and control of the aircraft. This attitude and control behaves in a realistic manner. Slightly adjustable is the F/C. The F/C is the ratio of the autopilot to the control stick. It is set to 0.4 by default. This means that the autopilot is not completely superfluous, so that you can still take off and land the aircraft. The Dash 8 Q400 is the largest regional airliner of the Q Series and can seat up to 86 passengers. Powered by two 5000 shp turboprop engines and six-bladed all-composite propellers, the Q400 has a cruise speed of 360 knots and can climb up to flight level FL270. Maximum range is over 1100 nautical miles. The modern cockpit features 5 large screen LCDs and is equipped with the latest avionics systems. More than 500 units of the Q400 have been built since 1999. The Q400 for Aerofly FS 2 features realistic flight dynamics, a detailed auto flight system and an accurate turboprop engine simulation. Game "Aerofly FS 2 - Q400" Gameplay: Most important for the game is Flight and Level view modes: You can look down from above or zoom in from the location in which you land and check the views in between the flight
