neurofibromatosis type 1 (NF1). NF1 is a tumor suppressor gene that is mutated in patients with NF1. To investigate the molecular mechanisms of tumorigenesis in NF1, we performed the integrative analysis of the genomic profiles of NF1-related tumors, and found a high frequency of somatic mutations in this gene. The large majority of these mutations occurred in non-coding regions, causing an expansion of some NF1 transcripts and increase of the total number of mRNA molecules. This increase of the total mRNA abundance is probably not simply due to a
