Observations on Donald Trump As part of my continuing 'Observations on Donald Trump' series, this time looking at why he's doing so well in the polls in the Republican primary, even though he's not exactly a conservative. For Trump to have a real chance to win the nomination he will have to appeal to conservative primary voters who regard him as a dangerous demagogue who will be a huge disaster for the country. To that end, today I'm going to look at a speech he gave a couple of days ago in which he says pretty much exactly what you'd expect him to say: ...[N]obody cares about your p—y. I mean, I wouldn't be talking about this, if I didn't have a large number of women as a group, frankly. And, frankly, I have no idea why. I have no idea

why. So, when you say I'm sexist, you're being very sexist. Because I have a very good relationship with women. And you have women around. I'm not a chauvinist. I have more women around than men. But you're very, very angry at me. And, by the way, you're not going to get over it. I'm going to win. You're never going to get over it. This is the first place to start. It's a kind of perpetual motion machine, keeping trashing women, while at the same time having a large number of them around, although he still doesn't seem to know exactly how many there are. In a similar vein, we heard a few weeks ago that he 'has had more women' around than anybody in show business, although again the source seems to be Donald. What then to make of the claim that he has 'a very good relationship with women'? Well, this is where his recent behaviour comes in. He gave a press conference in which he boasted about having 'groped' women and similar abuse, and since then, and not for the first time, he's been calling off the debate with Trump. There's a lot of very good detail on this in David Cay Johnston's entertaining 6d1f23a050
