To set up a Web-based resource to provide access to online documents, such as from the DMZ, the SCADA environments, and the DMZ, through a secure connection. This section describes how to set up and configure a Web-based resource to allow access to an intranet or to the Internet through a secure connection. To enable an administrator to view different levels of access to a specific resource, such as through the use of multiple passwords. Enter a series of passwords as a comma-separated list. The settings are saved in the IIS configuration file. To create a virtual directory that is allowed to receive URL access through the SharePoint Internet Information Services (IIS) (SPIIS) Web site, but that is restricted from Internet access. (Access from the Internet is allowed only to specific servers in the DMZ.) In a distributed network environment, you also can set up a server that acts as the gateway to the external network, and then you can use client-side logic or a monitoring tool to limit or enforce access to that server. To set up a server farm where you can create multiple
